

Third-Party Content Agreement

This Third-Party Content Agreement (the “Agreement”) outlines the terms and conditions under which you, _____, the author of the content (the “Content”) incorporated into or otherwise included within this journal _____ (title of manuscript submitted to the American Journal of Critical Care) (the “Work”), agree to allow the American Association of Critical-Care Nurses (AACN) and the author of the Work (“Author”) to use the content in the Work, to reproduce that Content in the Work, and to permit third parties the right to do so.

By signing below, you hereby represent and agree to the following:

1. LICENSE.

I hereby grant to AACN and the Author a non-exclusive, royalty-free, perpetual, worldwide license, with the right to sublicense the Content, including for the purpose of creating derivative works, publication, distribution, aggregation and/or compilation, either electronically or in hard copy, in English and in foreign translations, only in connection with the Work.

2. REPRESENTATIONS.

I certify that the Content is original and does not incorporate or infringe any copyright, violate any other intellectual property, privacy, or other rights of any person or entity, or contain any libelous or other unlawful matter.

Title of Manuscript Submitted to the American Journal of Critical Care (the “Work”)

Description of Content (third-party content to be included in the manuscript)

Printed Name

Date

_____
Signature